

7

Mistakes That Could Ruin Your Personal Injury Claim

WYANT LAW

table of contents

Introduction

#1 Not Collecting Evidence

#2 Waiting to Get Medical Attention

#3 Not Following Your Doctor's Advice

#4 Talking to the Insurance Company

#5 Waiting to Talk to a Lawyer

#6 Thinking a Case isn't Worth It

#7 Hiring the Wrong Lawyer

Conclusion

Introduction

Our Fishers personal injury lawyer cares deeply about the success of your case. As such, we have laid out seven mistakes that you should avoid making if you want a successful personal injury case. Once you have read this over, give us a call right away to set up your free, initial consultation to get started on getting justice you are entitled to.

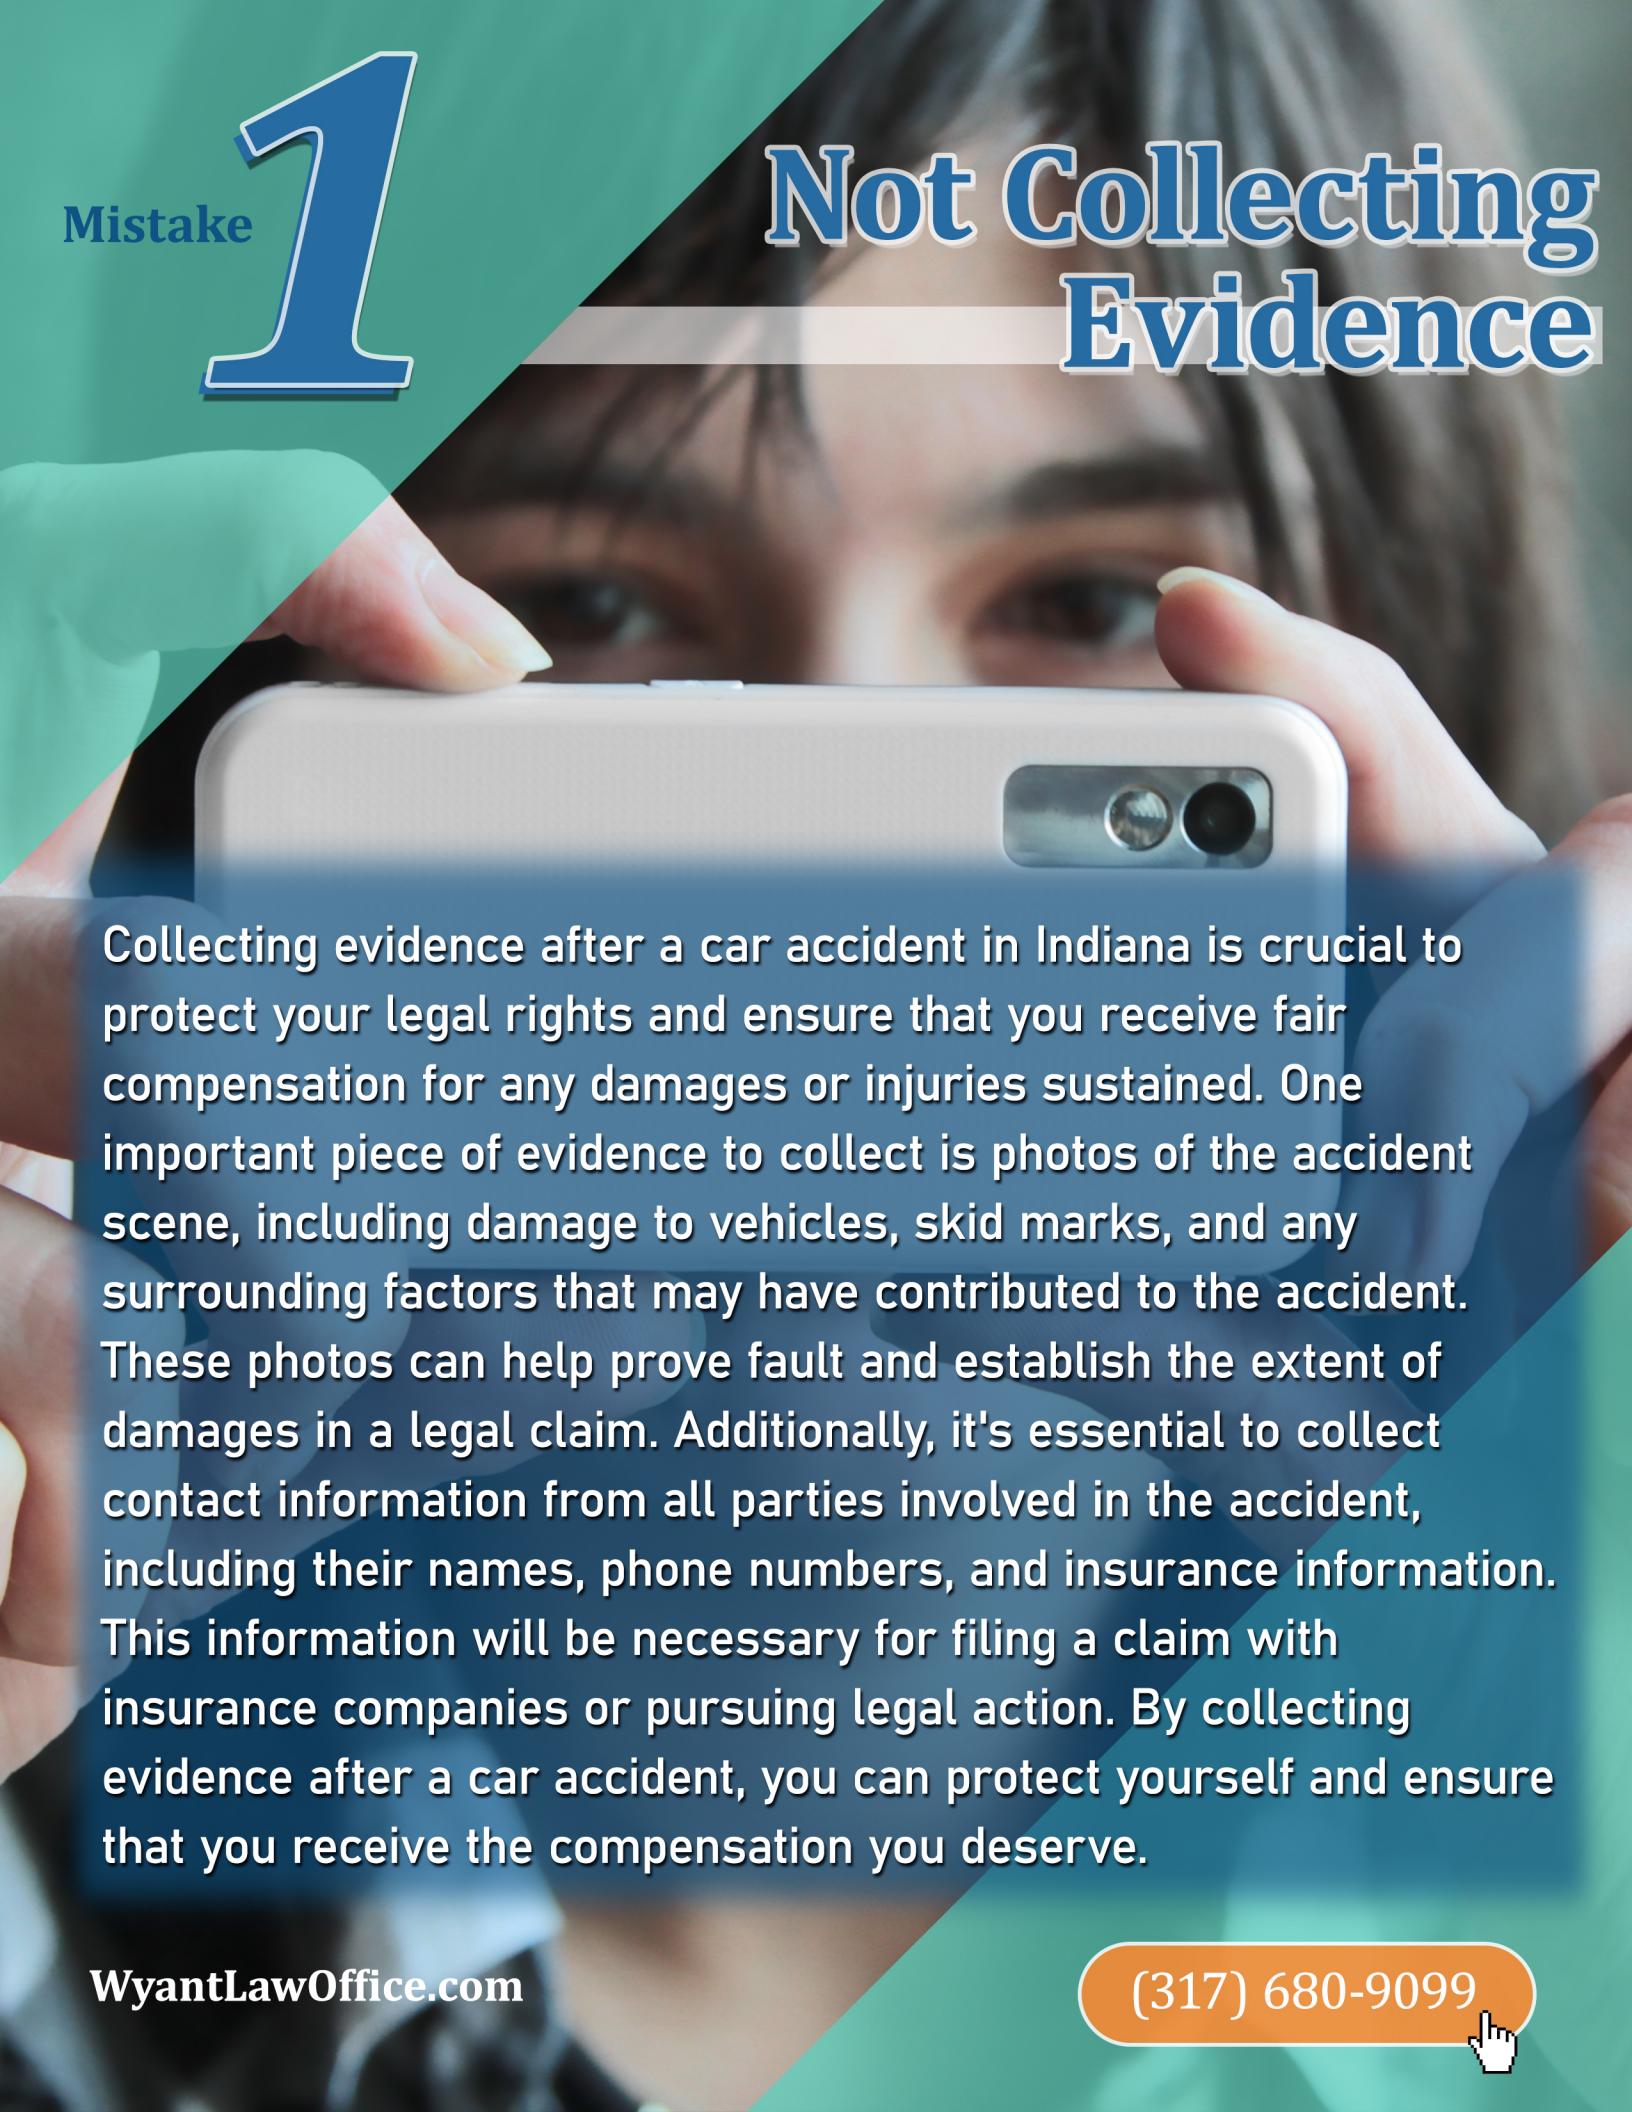

WyantLawOffice.com

(317) 680-9099

Mistake

1

Not Collecting Evidence

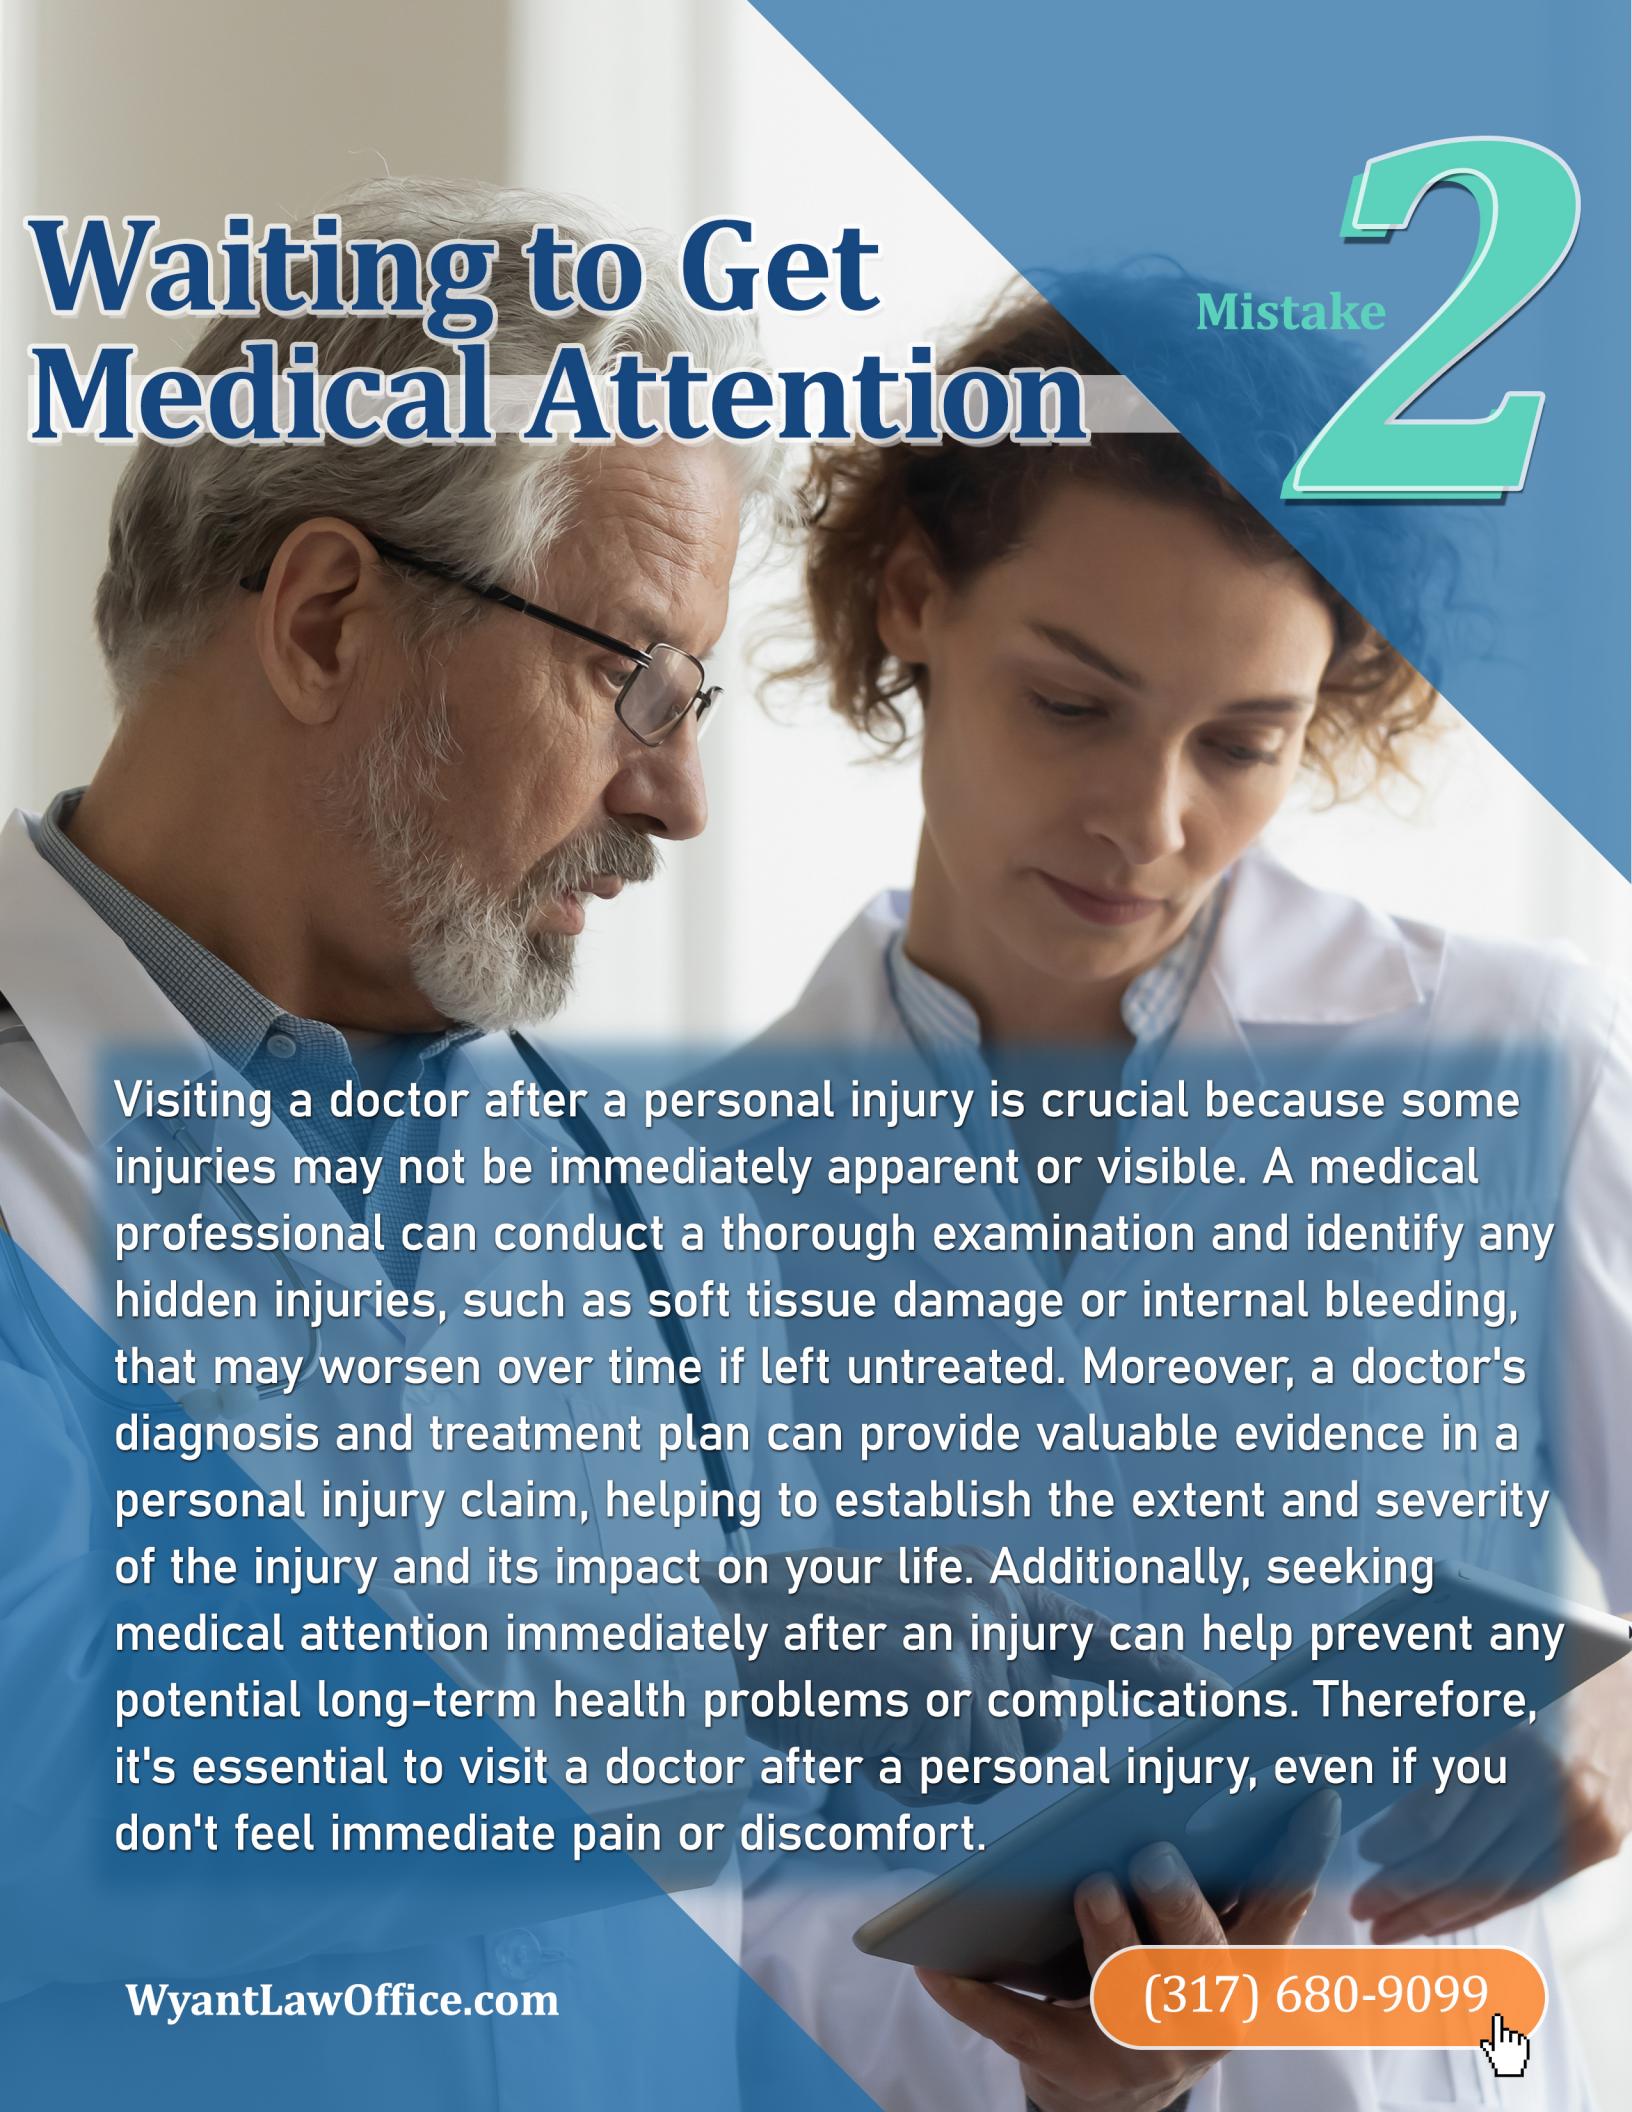

Collecting evidence after a car accident in Indiana is crucial to protect your legal rights and ensure that you receive fair compensation for any damages or injuries sustained. One important piece of evidence to collect is photos of the accident scene, including damage to vehicles, skid marks, and any surrounding factors that may have contributed to the accident. These photos can help prove fault and establish the extent of damages in a legal claim. Additionally, it's essential to collect contact information from all parties involved in the accident, including their names, phone numbers, and insurance information. This information will be necessary for filing a claim with insurance companies or pursuing legal action. By collecting evidence after a car accident, you can protect yourself and ensure that you receive the compensation you deserve.

Waiting to Get Medical Attention

Mistake

2

A close-up photograph of a medical consultation. An older man with a white beard and glasses, wearing a white lab coat, is looking down at a tablet held by a younger woman with curly hair, also in a white lab coat. They are both looking at the screen of the tablet. The background is a bright, clinical setting.

Visiting a doctor after a personal injury is crucial because some injuries may not be immediately apparent or visible. A medical professional can conduct a thorough examination and identify any hidden injuries, such as soft tissue damage or internal bleeding, that may worsen over time if left untreated. Moreover, a doctor's diagnosis and treatment plan can provide valuable evidence in a personal injury claim, helping to establish the extent and severity of the injury and its impact on your life. Additionally, seeking medical attention immediately after an injury can help prevent any potential long-term health problems or complications. Therefore, it's essential to visit a doctor after a personal injury, even if you don't feel immediate pain or discomfort.

Mistake

3

Not Following Your Doctor's Advice

Following the doctor's advice after a personal injury is crucial for a successful recovery. A medical professional's treatment plan is designed to help you heal and regain your health as quickly and safely as possible. Ignoring their advice or not following it precisely can result in further injury or even delay your recovery. Moreover, if you're pursuing a personal injury claim, failing to follow the doctor's advice can undermine your case, as it suggests that you're not taking your injury seriously. By adhering to the doctor's recommendations, you not only improve your chances of a full recovery but also strengthen your legal claim. Therefore, it's essential to listen to and follow the doctor's advice after a personal injury.

Talking to the Insurance Company

4

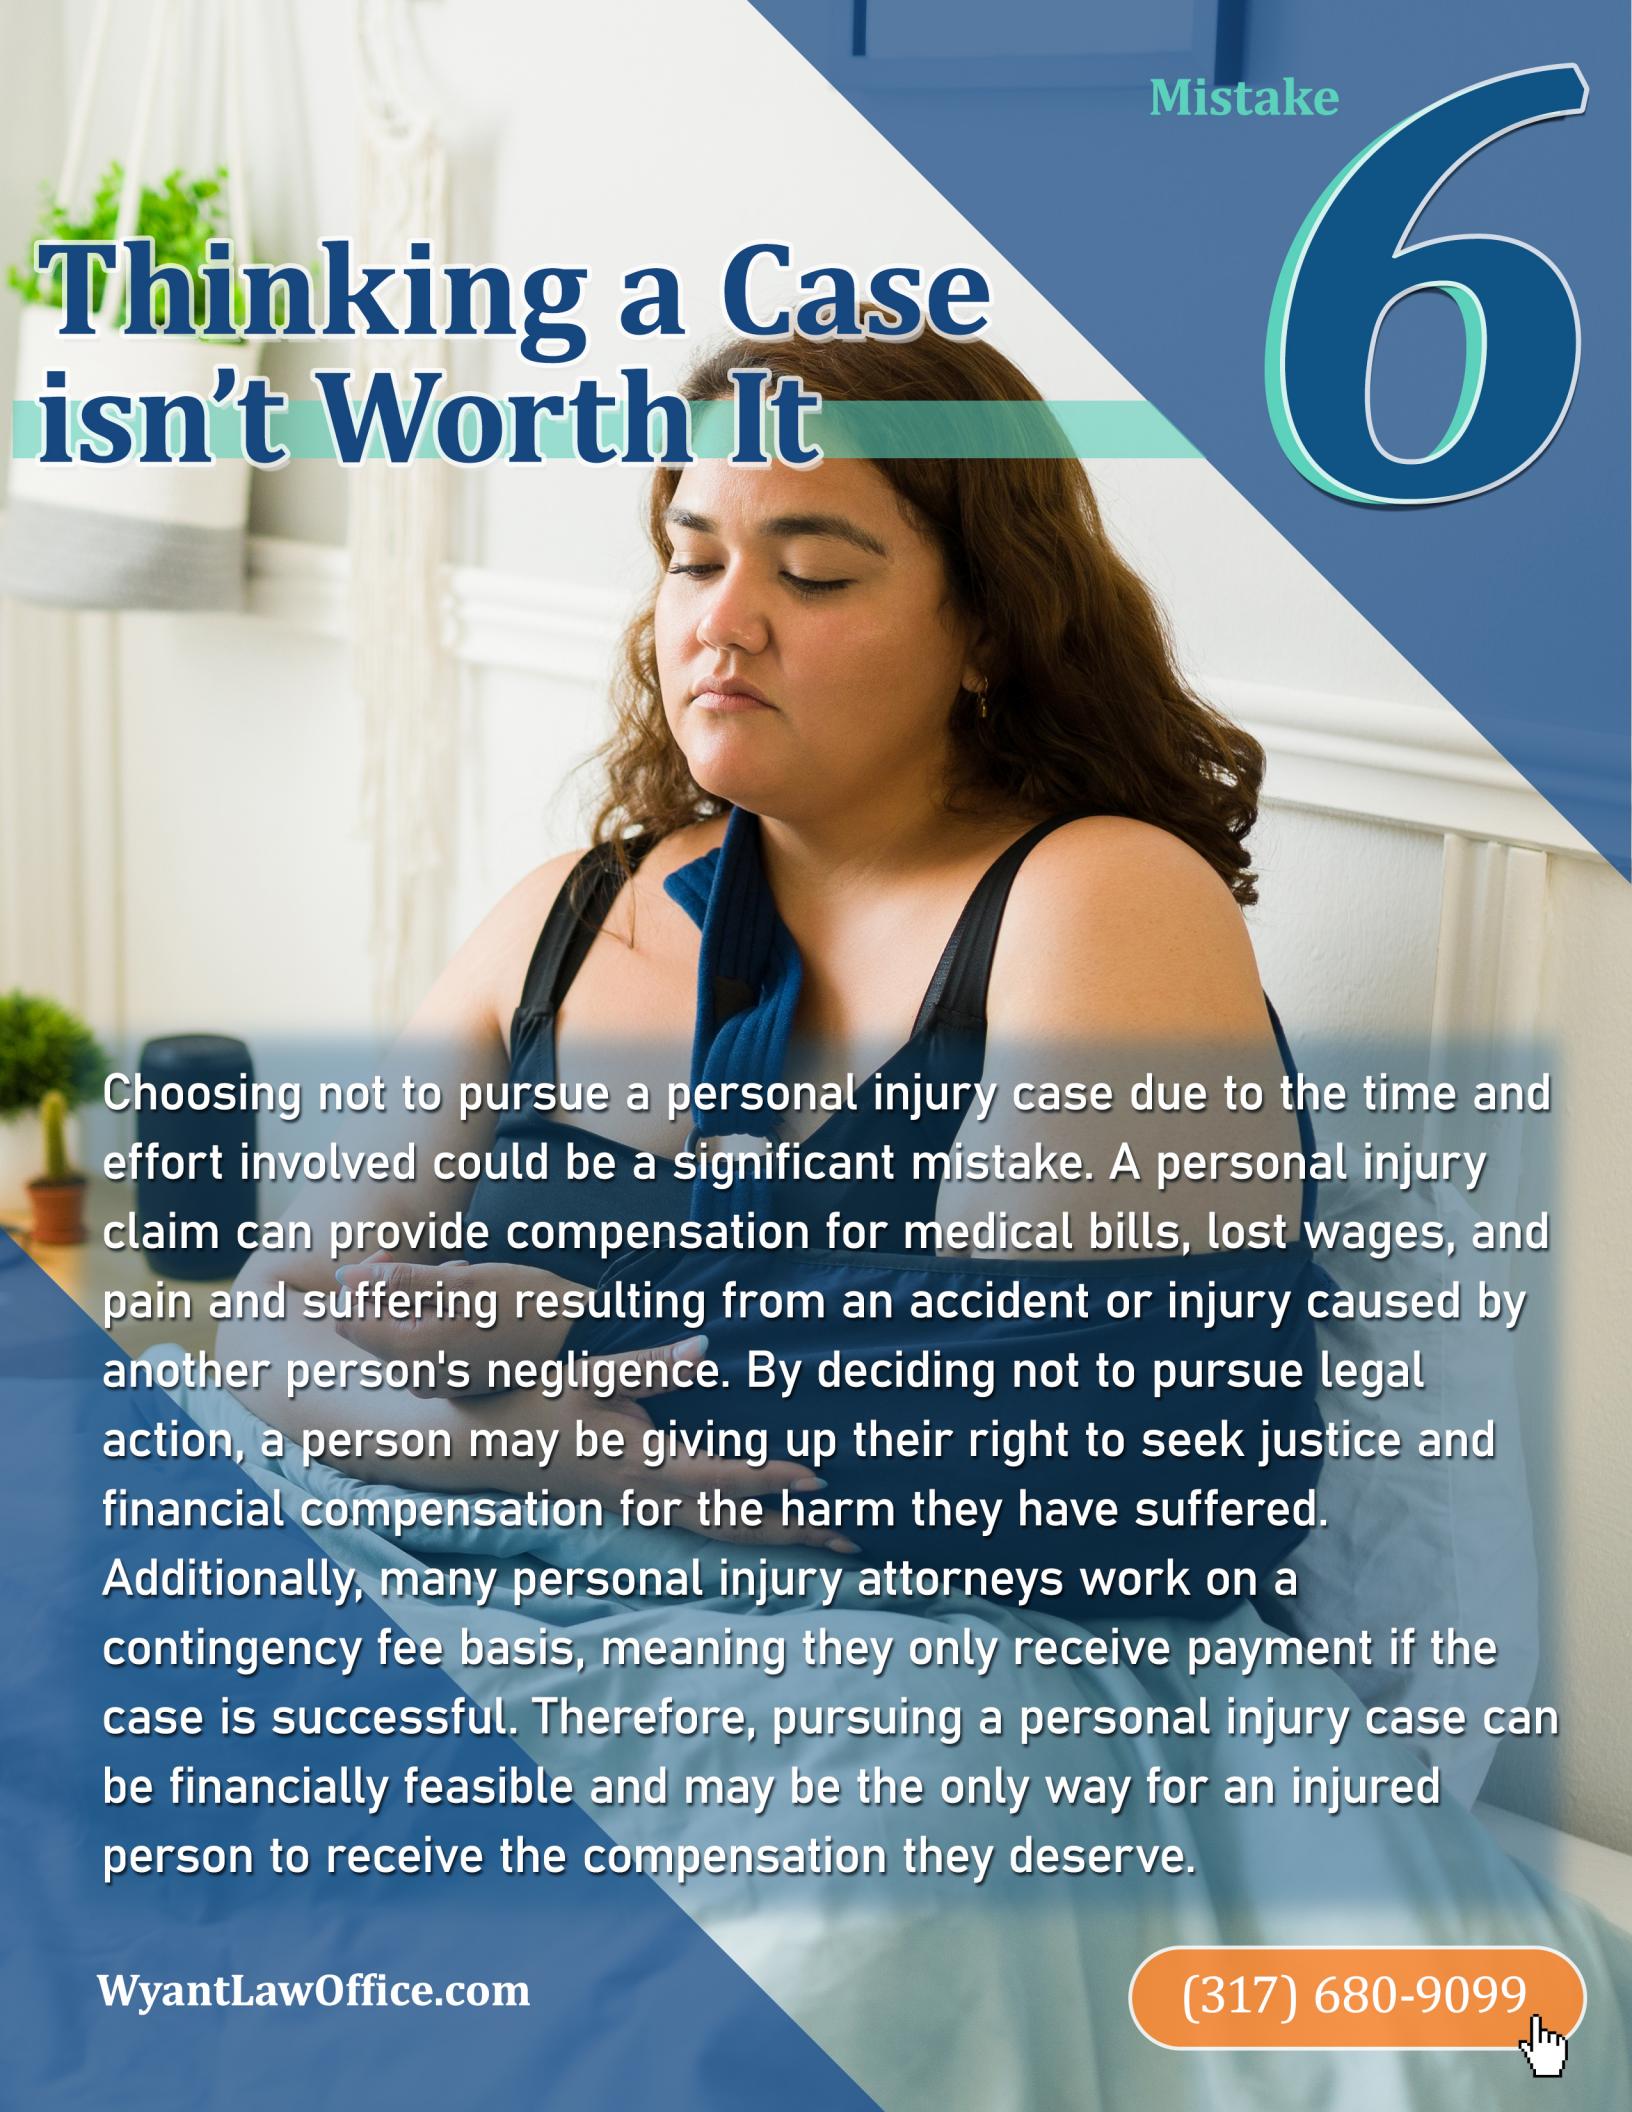

If you have suffered a personal injury and are dealing with an insurance company, it is generally recommended that you do not speak with them until you have hired a lawyer. Insurance companies are in the business of making money, and their interests often do not align with yours. They may try to get you to settle for a lower amount than you deserve or use your words against you to deny your claim. By hiring a lawyer, you can have someone on your side who knows the legal system and can negotiate with the insurance company on your behalf. Your lawyer can advise you on what to say and what not to say, protecting your rights and ensuring that you receive fair compensation for your injuries.

Waiting to Talk to a Lawyer

If you've been involved in an accident and you want justice for your injuries, you need to reach out to our lawyers as soon as you possibly can. You are being held to a legal deadline called the statute of limitations. The state of Illinois gives you two years for most personal injury cases to bring your case to civil court to get compensation. It is easy for time to slip away from you if you aren't actively thinking about something. You might think that you've plenty of time to bring a claim but then all of a sudden, it's been almost 2 years and you have yet to talk to a lawyer. We don't want you to miss out on justice simply because you waited to talk to someone. Call us right away.

Thinking a Case isn't Worth It

Choosing not to pursue a personal injury case due to the time and effort involved could be a significant mistake. A personal injury claim can provide compensation for medical bills, lost wages, and pain and suffering resulting from an accident or injury caused by another person's negligence. By deciding not to pursue legal action, a person may be giving up their right to seek justice and financial compensation for the harm they have suffered. Additionally, many personal injury attorneys work on a contingency fee basis, meaning they only receive payment if the case is successful. Therefore, pursuing a personal injury case can be financially feasible and may be the only way for an injured person to receive the compensation they deserve.

Mistake

7

Hiring the Wrong Lawyer

Hiring the wrong lawyer can be a costly mistake, particularly when it comes to personal injury cases. A successful personal injury lawyer should have experience and expertise in the specific type of case being pursued, and should be dedicated to fighting for their client's best interests. It is important to look for a lawyer who is responsive, communicates clearly and regularly with their clients, and has a track record of successful outcomes. Additionally, a good personal injury lawyer should have a thorough understanding of the legal process, including the procedural rules and statutes of limitations that apply to each case. Hiring a lawyer who lacks experience, expertise, or dedication to the case could lead to poor representation and potentially harm the client's chances of receiving fair compensation for their injuries. It is important to do thorough research and consider all factors before choosing a personal injury lawyer to represent you.

Conclusion

Chris Wyant is a highly experienced and skilled personal injury attorney who specializes in representing clients in Fisher's injury cases. With his in-depth knowledge of the legal system and his commitment to his clients, Chris has a proven track record of achieving successful outcomes for his clients. If you have been injured in Fisher's area and need an attorney who will fight for your rights and work tirelessly to get you the compensation you deserve, Chris Wyant is an excellent choice.